Do you have an event, conference or training course to organise? We can help.

The Division of Developmental Medicine, University of Glasgow runs an enterprising and innovative full event management service offering conferences, meetings and specialised training courses. This professional service can be accessed by all divisions within the medical faculty and is also available to other organisations outwith the University.

We can also design and organise bespoke training courses, helping you to develop and train staff at your place of work. Maybe you have a health related topic that you think needs to be addressed? Or a subject that you and your colleagues need training on? We can bring together skilled and experienced trainers who will come to your workplace or venue of your choice armed with a course designed to meet your objectives and fit your budget and timescales.

The personal data that you supply during the registration of this conference on Spirituality and Health Care, 3rd November 2009, will be entered into a database and used by the University of Glasgow or its agents to manage your registration for, and attendance at, the conference. Unless you advise to the contrary, in writing and in advance to the Conference Organiser, your name and affiliation may be made available in a list of delegates to both attendees at, and the sponsor(s) of the conference. The personal data in the database will be retained by the University, unless requested in writing to the Conference Organiser, and may be used in future to inform you about other appropriate services and events that may be organised by or in conjunction with, the University.

Cancellation policy: Cancellations will only be accepted in writing via post or email. A refund, less an administration charge of £25.00 will be given to all cancellations received before Tuesday 6th October 2009. Thereafter the full fee is payable, regardless if the delegate attends or not. Substitutions can be made at anytime. The organisers reserve the right to change the speakers and venue as required.

This conference organised by the University of Glasgow, Faculty of Medicine, brings together an assembly of expert speakers from the fields of both spirituality and health care. The spiritual care needs of patients have become increasingly more important in today's multi-faith healthcare system. This programme will explore the significance of spirituality in healthcare today and examine how it can be successfully integrated into multi-disciplinary healthcare practices. You will have an opportunity to hear current information, to learn about and share good practice, to network and take away practical information which can be applied in your work setting.

Who should attend?

This conference programme has been developed to be of interest to individuals with an interest in spirituality within a healthcare setting including; medical and health professionals, nurses and allied health professionals, palliative care specialists, chaplains and clergy, healthcare managers and administrators, carers, hospices, voluntary organisations and charities. Others with an interest in the topic are also welcome to attend.
