PRESIDENT'S WELCOME

Professor Sue Bailey

It's my great pleasure to introduce the 2011 Annual Review, which is our opportunity to showcase some of the fantastic work that has been done over the past 12 months. As I only began my three-year term of office in July, many of the achievements were overseen by my predecessor, Professor Dinesh Bhugra.

I'm delighted to be continuing Dinesh's excellent work, including the RCPsych Awards that he established in 2009. These Awards bring national recognition to teams and individuals who are making a real difference to the lives of service users and carers (see pages 12 and 13 for a celebration of this year's winners).

I took up my post in the midst of unprecedented NHS reforms in England. Members have expressed to me their very real fears that the new Health and Social Care Bill will not improve patient care or deliver cost-effective care, and could increase health inequalities. That's why the College has been robust in putting forward our concerns throughout the process. You can find out more about how we represent psychiatry to parliamentarians across the UK on pages 6 and 7.

The College is committed to working in true partnership with service users and carers – one of our three core purposes (see box below). Our Divisions are key to this, and you can get a flavour of some of their work on pages 8 and 9.

The core purposes of the Royal College of Psychiatrists are to:

- set standards and promote excellence in psychiatry and mental healthcare
- lead, represent and support psychiatrists
- work with service users, carers and their organisations

Problems with recruiting young doctors into our specialty have been troubling the College for many years. This year we made a big step forward by appointing a dedicated Associate Registrar for Recruitment, Dr Tom Brown, who has put in place a clear strategy for future work (pages 10 and 11). Recruitment will continue to be a priority for us in 2012, alongside our new official College campaign targeting people on the margins. We look back at the successes of Fair Deal, our campaign which ran from 2008 to 2011, on page 14.

Finally, I would like to thank everyone – Members, Fellows and staff – for their continued support. The College is not simply an office in Belgrave Square. It is a vast network of hard-working and enthusiastic people stretching across the UK and overseas. Together, we should be proud of our achievements this year and look forward to 2012.

Professor Sue Bailey
President

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE YEAR 2011

The College and its members promoted its core purposes (see p. 1) with a broad range of activities throughout 2011

Recognising excellence

Professor Hamid Ghodse was given the Lifetime Achievement Award at the RCPsych Awards 2011, and Dr Claire Lawton from Cambridge won the Psychiatrist of the Year. Dr Peter Carter, the Chief Executive of the Royal College of Nursing, was awarded the President's Medal in recognition of his promotion of mental health services (see pp. 12–13, 16). Professor Robin Murray was awarded a Knighthood in the New Year's Honours List for services to medicine.

Working with service users and carers

The College reinforced its central commitment to involving service users and carers at the heart of its activities by increasing funding to Faculties, Sections and Divisions for this purpose. Examples of events included a stakeholders' meeting held by the South West Division to inform people of the way services are expected to change, and to encourage them to become involved in a new Steering Group.

Working with government

The College is a key member of lobbying and advisory groups in the devolved jurisdictions. These include work with Health Inspectorate Wales on several initiatives, and with the Mental Health and Learning Disability Alliance in Northern Ireland. The College provides the Secretariat for the Cross-Party Group on Mental Health of the Scottish Parliament.

Around the country

The College centrally, and through College Divisions throughout the country, held a huge range of meetings and events, from the International Congress, which focused on Evidence-Based Practice, to local events on 'commissioning mental health services' and 'the patient experience'. Divisional academic meetings gave members the opportunity to discuss recent advances in psychiatry with local colleagues.

Leadership and management

The College will be an active member of the new Faculty of Medical Leadership and Management of the UK, set up by the Academy of Medical Royal Colleges in March 2011 to promote the advancement of medical leadership, management and quality improvement at all stages of the medical career for the benefit of patients.

Working with other organisations

The College's three-year Fair Deal campaign reached its climax in 2011. It has achieved a significant increase in prominence for its underlying principles (see p. 14). A number of College publications (see p. 24) arose from joint working with other organisations, such as Our Invisible Addicts (Council Report CR165) – highlighting the growing issues of alcohol and drug misuse among older people.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE YEAR 2011

The College and its members promoted its core purposes (see p. 1) with a broad range of activities throughout 2011

Encouraging higher standards

Membership of projects run by the College Centre for Quality Improvement continued to grow and new programmes aimed at improving the quality of eating disorder and rehabilitation services were started. Two national audits, of general hospital care for people with dementia and of psychological treatment services, were completed.

Informing people

The RCPsych Publications Department published or copublished 11 new books and 8 reports in 2011 (see p. 24). Two of these were among our bestsellers for most of the year. Mental Health Outcome Measures received a Highly Commended prize in the BMA Medical Book Awards 2011. The College now offers mental health information in 21 languages, with 17 'Key Facts' leaflets about common mental health problems. The College's public information pages have seen another increase in the number of visits: this year the pages received over 250 000 hits per month – 50 000 more than last year.

International activities

The College's presence at the highest level of international psychiatry was even further enhanced by the elections of Professor Dinesh Bhugra as President Elect of the World Psychiatric Association, Dr Afzal Javed as Secretary for Sections, and Professor Linda Gask as Zonal Representative for Western Europe. The establishment of a new Special Interest Group in Volunteering further strengthened the College's support for psychiatric services in areas of need around the world. The group will promote volunteer work overseas for psychiatrists, fundraising, newsletter and e-groups, teaching, distance support through the internet, advocacy of the volunteer role, support for international psychiatry, and research and audit.

Supporting College members

Council agreed that the rights and privileges of Specialist Associate members of the College should be extended, including the ability to vote in College elections and stand for elected College offices up to and including President. A Specialist Advisor for Remediation Services (Dr Pete Snowden) was appointed; his remit will include the new Invited Review Mechanism, which will assist trusts in assessing services or individual doctors.

Education and training for psychiatrists

A broad range of initiatives were undertaken to encourage students to consider psychiatry as a career. A Scottish consortium of universities was awarded nine PhD training fellowships for psychiatry trainees by the Medical Research Foundation, after a national competition. The Northern Ireland Division introduced Masterclasses, which were well received. Feedback from Summer Schools for medical students interested in specialising in psychiatry around the country was very positive (see p. 11). Tapping into students' creativity, the South West Division's second annual Poetry Competition received over 130 entries.

EXCELLENCE: CONFERENCES AND TRAINING

Dr Helen Miller, Director of Conferences

One of the College's core objectives is to provide appropriate education and training programmes for psychiatrists and mental health professionals at all stages of their careers. To do this our Conferences Unit and the College Education and Training Centre (CETC) put together a huge number of conferences and courses – which this year have been bigger and better than ever.

In 2011, we held 14 Faculty meetings. These, as well as our Special Interest Group meetings, continue to be well-attended and continuously improve their programmes. But the conference highlight of the year was undoubtedly the International Congress. Held in Brighton – the quintessential British seaside town – it was the best-attended Congress to date, with over 1500 delegates.

It also provided the perfect opportunity to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the Royal College of Psychiatrists. It's traditional to mark celebrations with feasts, so the organising committee worked hard to source the finest psychiatrists, sessions, courses, workshops and topics – a veritable psychiatric buffet and gluttony of 'Evidence Based Practice'! The programme was extremely well received, and the audience included trainees, medical students as well as healthcare professionals other than doctors.

The CETC has provided many well-received training courses, and there has been growing interest in our 'Training at your place' on-site courses. The College is aware that training budgets are being constantly cut, and we are always looking for ways to make our training courses more affordable. Our on-site training courses have many advantages, such as requiring staff to take less time away from the workplace, no extra travel and overnight costs, and the ability to train whole teams at once as a team-building exercise.

It makes sense to bring the work of our hugely successful conferences unit and education and training centre more closely together. Therefore, we have worked hard this year to develop a new single entity called the Centre for Advanced Learning and Conferences (CALC). I will oversee the work of CALC, which will be up and running from January 2012.

EXCELLENCE: PROVIDING CONTINUING PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT IN PSYCHIATRY

Dave Jago, Director of Publications and Website

The College has long been committed to supporting its members' continuing professional development (CPD) with learning materials tailored to their needs. Back in 1994, a dedicated CPD journal for members was established – Advances in Psychiatric Treatment. Then, in 2005, the CPD Online learning platform was launched.

Together, they provide a comprehensive suite of CPD materials. Advances publishes around 80 full-length reviews per year of subjects of current clinical importance, often accompanied by expert commentaries. For those who prefer a more self-directed style of learning, CPD Online provides a catalogue of around 120 interactive modules – and it's growing all the time.

It is a measure of the success of CPD Online and Advances that the College Officers saw it as a priority to find ways of maximising access to and usage of these CPD materials among our members. As a result, in 2011, two key decisions were made to enhance CPD provision for our members.

Advances free to all members

From January 2012, Advances is free online to all members, of all grades (and the free online subscription can be upgraded to print+online at a discount rate of £50). As well as increasing readership among consultant psychiatrists, this will encourage use of the journal by training grades and Student Associates.

CPD Online credits extended

CPD Online is offered to all members at the highly discounted rate of £45 per year. Meanwhile, up to 1.5 CPD credits are available for each module successfully completed, and from January 2012 credits gained from CPD Online can contribute up to 25 hours towards the annual CPD requirement of 50 hours.

LEADERSHIP: REPRESENTING PSYCHIATRISTS TO PARLIAMENTARIANS ACROSS THE UK

The UK Parliament

Dr Adrian James, Chair of the Westminster Parliamentary Liaison Committee

The College has an ongoing and active programme of parliamentary work overseen by the Westminster Parliamentary Liaison Committee with input from the Policy Unit. This year, we have worked on the Health and Social Care Bill and the Welfare Reform Bill, providing MPs and Peers with briefing documents and suggesting amendments.

We have liaised with Peers to inform the debate on the Health and Social Care Bill as it has progressed through the House of Lords. We have also worked closely with Lord Dennis Stevenson on his Mental Health (Discrimination) Bill, which challenges mental health stigma and aims to repeal discriminatory laws against those with mental ill health. The Government has pledged its support for the Bill which, following briefings from the College, has progressed to committee stage where it will be debated in more detail.

We continue to provide secretarial support to the All-Party Parliamentary Group on Mental Health, which has been looking at the effects of NHS reforms on mental healthcare, and we attend meetings of many other All-Party Groups on relevant issues.

The College attended all three major political party conferences in the autumn. We spoke with ministers and shadow ministers covering a range of policy areas that affect mental health, including alcohol, welfare reform, commissioning and public health. We also met with MPs, Peers and stakeholders from the health sector, including colleagues from mental health charities and the other medical Royal Colleges.

The Northern Ireland Assembly

Dr Philip McGarry, Chair of RCPsych in Northern Ireland

The Assembly elections in Northern Ireland in May provided the opportunity to send a manifesto to all candidates calling for better funding for mental health services, commitment to the introduction of single legislation for mental health and capacity, backing for a minimum unit price for alcohol, and placing mental health at the heart of the public health agenda.

The College has been a leader in lobbying for a minimum unit price for alcohol, and the Ministers for Social Development and Health chose Clifton House – the home of the College in Northern Ireland – to launch a consultation on alcohol pricing (see photo opposite). I was invited to speak at the event, and did many media interviews arguing the need for minimum pricing.

The elections resulted in a new Health Minister and invigorated Assembly Health Committee, who have been keen to engage with the College on issues, including mental health legislation. Stormont is proceeding with plans to introduce a Capacity (Health, Welfare and Finance) Bill that will, for the first time, encompass mental health legislation within capacity law. The College is a key member of the Mental Health and Learning Disability Alliance that lobbies for a fair and workable law.

The Scottish Government

Dr Peter Rice, Chair of RCPsych in Scotland

Spring 2011 was a key time in Scottish politics. In March, the RCPsych in Scotland launched a manifesto ahead of the May Scottish elections, calling on the political parties to give a high priority in the next Parliament to the prevention and treatment of, and recovery from, mental illness and the promotion of mental well-being.

The Manifesto covered six priority areas: early years, dementia, protection of frontline services, emergency and crisis care, research in mental health, and alcohol misuse. The manifesto was circulated to all Parliamentary candidates and a large number of MSPs. It was then used for Fringe meetings at the Scottish Liberal Democrats and the Scottish Conservatives party conferences.

The theme for the Liberal Democrats conference was research, and speakers illustrated the differences in funding between mental health and other areas of medical research. The Registrar, Dr Laurence Mynors-Wallis, was a guest speaker at the Scottish Conservatives and spoke about all the changes to mental health services in England and what lessons could be learned by Scotland. Discussions about the manifesto also took place with individual MSPs at the Labour Party Conference.

For the Scottish National Party annual conference in October, the College organised a fringe meeting in partnership with the Samaritans, drawing attention to the links between suicide and the economic downturn.

The Welsh Assembly

Dr Helen Matthews, Chair of RCPsych in Wales

The Mental Health (Wales) Measure (or 'Welsh Law') was granted Royal Assent in December 2010. The Measure deals with assessment, treatment and advocacy in mental health. Once implemented in late 2012, the Measure will see changes in the requirements of mental health practitioners, as more service users of secondary care are entitled to personal treatment plans, direct referrals back into secondary care, and independent mental health advocacy. The RCPsych in Wales has been involved during the Welsh Government's consultation exercises on the Measure and more recently on the Regulations relating to the Measure.

We also had significant input to new guidance relating to the Approved Clinician Process, which was implemented in March. This new guidance has been welcomed by the membership in Wales.

ENGAGEMENT: WORKING WITH SERVICE USERS, CARERS AND THEIR ORGANISATIONS

MENTAL HEALTH PUBLIC EDUCATION HUBS

Dr Safi Afghan, Public Education Officer, West Midlands Division

The concept of Mental Health Public Education Hubs was discussed and agreed at a stakeholder meeting organised by the Public Education Committee of the West Midlands Division in May 2010. Over the past 12 months, the idea has really gained momentum.

It is driven by the principle of establishing meaningful partnership with service users and carers in a devolved environment, i.e. operating at a decentralised level with the view of achieving following objectives:

- to challenge stigma and discrimination inside mental health territory
- to hold regular tripartite meetings among local motivated psychiatrists, GPs and other clinicians, service users, carers and other parties interested in mental health
- to share better understanding and learning on issues relating to patient care
- to positively influence the public, media, third sector and other organisations regarding the true image of biological and psychosocial advances in mental health
- to advocate for changes in the commissioning, delivery and quality of mental health services in the catchment area of the hub

- to share success stories, as well as express an opinion on anticipated changes in service provision within the catchment area of the hub
- to disseminate the recommendations of the hubs through letters, emails and other communication to local mental health services, local media, third- and voluntary-sector organisations.

So far, we have formed hubs in three areas:

Sutton Coldfield: This was the first hub to be developed on the initiative of Dr Pravir Sharma, and it has been holding regular meetings.

Hereford: Enthusiastic carers and service user groups were already working together on a similar concept, and they have now agreed to support the hubs model

Walsall: The hub was launched at a well-attended and vibrant meeting on 22 September.

We have received expressions of interest from a further three areas in the West Midlands, and hope to establish these new hubs over the coming year.

THE SERVICE USER RECOVERY FORUM

Roy Birch and Adrian Fisher, Forum co-chairs

In January 2011, we were elected as co-chairs of the Service Users' Recovery Forum (SURF) by the Forum's membership. The Forum consists of more than 30 people across all regions of the UK who have a lived experience of mental ill health and who make a unique contribution to the work of the College. They provide representation on all of the key decision-making committees of the College, including Council.

Since taking the chair, we have contributed to a number of policy decisions, including being actively involved in the production of a new College Report on Independent Advocacy for People with Mental Disorder, due for publication next year. Members of the Forum have also been working with the new Joint Commissioning Panel for Mental Health, which was launched this year to help shape the future commissioning of mental health services. Service users have sat on the Panel's expert reference groups and helped in the production of a series of commissioning guides, which will begin to be launched early next year.

SURF is increasingly asked to contribute to College policy work, as well as to external consultations. We recently ran a survey of all lay individuals about their experiences of being involved in the work of the College and how we can improve things in the future.

A number of members of the Forum had the opportunity to attend the International Congress held in Brighton (28 June to 1 July), together with members of the Carers' Forum. We were very impressed by the quality of the scientific programme and the diversity of issues covered.

Roy Birch (right) and Adrian Fisher, outside the College's London headquarters

In November, SURF co-hosted, with the Carers' Forum, the Service Users' and Carers' Annual Meeting, which focused on collaborative working with professionals. We took part in some fascinating workshops on the role of the family in the triangle of care and advocacy.

The President recently invited the Forum to consider developing user-led research projects which will be a key initiative for us next year – there is a lot of enthusiasm for this exciting new project from members of SURF.

A NEW COLLEGE RECRUITMENT INITIATIVE

Dr Tom Brown, Associate Registrar for Recruitment

This year has been an important one in responding to the well-publicised difficulties in recruiting junior doctors to psychiatry. Applications for CT1 posts – especially from UK medical graduates – have remained low.

The Medical Programme Board (in England) expressed considerable concern and set up a Psychiatry Taskforce, under the leadership of the College, to make recommendations to ensure a sufficient supply of CCT holders in psychiatry.

The Taskforce presented an interim report to the Medical Programme Board in October, with a final report due in early 2012. Recommendations included an increase in the numbers of F1 and F2 placements in psychiatry, and improved access to psychiatry 'taster weeks' during Foundation training. It also recommended that the College promote careers in psychiatry through a coordinated recruitment campaign.

We have agreed to run a 5-year campaign with the aim of increasing applications to CT1 from UK medical graduates by 50%. Our focus will be on medical students and Foundation doctors. The College already has over 2000 Student Associates, and providing support and mentoring for these individuals is crucial. We also need initiatives targeting secondary school students, especially facilitating access to workplace-based experience for senior students.

Several studies have highlighted a number of 'push' factors which make students less likely to choose psychiatry as a career. These include the perception that our patients are untreatable and that our treatments are less evidence-based than in other areas of medicine. We are also seen as remote from the rest of medicine, and the victims of critical comments from others within the profession. Tackling these factors will be one of the challenges of the campaign.

We are aware of a number of excellent initiatives already happening around the country, including Summer Schools (see right), Student Societies, and various teaching initiatives. We plan to gather examples of good practice and roll these out around the country. The College's Divisions will be central to this strategy, assisted by the Faculties – especially the Academic Faculty. Everyone must become involved in this campaign, which is important both for the future of our profession and for the patients we treat.

INSTITUTE OF PSYCHIATRY SUMMER SCHOOL

Fiona Robertson, medical student at the University of Dundee

In July, 27 medical students converged for a week-long Summer School at the Institute of Psychiatry in London.

The course began with a 'speed dating' session where we chatted with psychiatrists from many sub-specialties. We spent a day at the Bethlem Royal Hospital learning about forensic psychiatry and the history of psychiatry. We met forensic patients in a rehabilitation ward at River House, a medium secure unit – a truly memorable experience.

We were privileged to be lectured by some of today's leading psychiatrists, including Professor Simon Wessely, who spoke about the Gulf War and its aftermath, and Dr Avie Luthra, who directed the Oscar-shortlisted film Lucky.

We also experienced the lifestyles of psychiatrists outside work, spending an evening in the pub with some trainees. A brave few went clubbing afterwards! Non-London students were provided with accommodation at a psychiatrist's own home, where we were lovingly catered for.

Our last evening was spent at the Royal College of Psychiatrists, with a guided tour by the Dean and lovely food and wine. The Summer School really opened my eyes to what a stimulating career psychiatry can be. They certainly converted me!

MEDFEST

Dr Kamran Ahmed, founder of Medfest

MedFest, the UK's first national medical film festival, was organised by the College's Psychiatric Trainees' Committee (PTC) with the aim of improving recruitment to psychiatry by changing the perception medical students have of psychiatrists.

The festival consisted of free events aimed at medical students and held at nine universities around the UK, exploring the theme 'The image of doctors in film'. The programme included a presentation and three short films: a historical gem from the Wellcome Archive, Britain's Health Services: The Family Doctor; the BAFTA-winning short Shadowscan about junior doctors working under pressure; and an animated short film on the image of psychiatrists, Beards & Bow-ties, that I had written and directed.

The MedFest team developed posters (see picture), created a website (www.medfest.co.uk), acquired funding, secured panelists (including authors, filmmakers, actors and eminent doctors) and conducted an evaluation. More than 450 people attended across all sites and we received a favourable review in the Lancet. Plans are underway for MedFest 2012.

FAIR DEAL

Dr Laurence Mynors-Wallis, Registrar

In June, a final report on the achievements of the College's three-year Fair Deal campaign was published. The campaign was launched in summer 2008 by Professor Dinesh Bhugra, who had just taken Presidential office, and ran for the duration of his Presidency.

Focusing on inequality, unfairness and discrimination across eight key areas, the Fair Deal campaign changed the law, reworked national and local policy and improved practice on the ground. Among its many achievements are:

Funding: the Academic Psychiatry Faculty advised the Medical Research Council and the Wellcome Trust on a dedicated mental health research strategy for the next decade.

Access to services: the Faculty of the Psychiatry of Learning Disability published a 'blueprint' on how consultants can provide or improve access to learning disability services.

In-patient services: following a survey in Northern Ireland of in-patient wards, the College introduced protocols for more efficient bed use.

Recovery and rehabilitation: the Rehabilitation and Social Psychiatry Faculty highlighted the problems with out-of-area placements for people with complex psychiatric problems.

Discrimination and stigma: a Private Members' Bill was presented to the House of Lords to address discrimination on grounds of mental health against MPs, jurors, company directors and school governors.

Engagement with service users and carers: the Eating Disorders Section has established a formal collaboration with BEAT (Beating Eating Disorders), and members of the College's Service Users' Recovery Forum and the Carers' Forum now attend party political conferences with the College team of psychiatrists.

Availability of psychological therapies: the College campaigned government to secure a commitment to Improving Access to Psychological Therapies (IAPT) across the UK and is still involved in the implementation of IAPT for child and adolescent mental health services.

Linking physical and mental health: new joint guidelines were published with the Royal College of Physicians aiming to reduce the number of avoidable deaths in people with anorexia. A debate on alcohol consumption and pricing has been important in all four UK countries, but more so in Northern Ireland and Scotland.

These are just a sample of the Campaign's many accomplishments.

The College will continue to pay attention to all the above themes in its future work across the UK, and worldwide through its International Divisions.

THE COLLEGE INTERNATIONALLY

Vanessa Cameron, Chief Executive

World Psychiatric Association elections

At its World Congress in September, the WPA announced the success of three senior College members in its elections. Dr Afzal Javed is now WPA Secretary of Sections; Professor Linda Gask has been re-elected as Zonal Representative for Western Europe; and our Immediate Past-President, Professor Dinesh Bhugra, is WPA President Elect. As well as extending our congratulations, this magnificent achievement has prompted me to briefly survey just a few of the activities of the College internationally.

Setting standards, promoting excellence

A group of members comprising the Iraq Subcommittee have continued their work to help improve standards of mental healthcare in that country. This year, efforts were focused on good practice in rapid tranquillisation, patient rights and medical record-keeping. One significant success has been the banning of unmodified ECT in the biggest psychiatric hospital in Iraq. The College's journal International Psychiatry, now in its eighth year of publication, continues to promote high-quality research around the world. It particularly welcomes contributions from the College's 2700 members and associates based outside the UK. Work has continued to increase access to MRCPsych examinations internationally; this year, a CASC examination was established in Hong Kong, in conjunction with the Hong Kong College of Psychiatrists, and positive steps have been made towards the establishment of written papers in India and the Middle East. After qualification, psychiatrists around the world need access to the highest-quality continuing professional development (CPD) materials. The College's suite of products designed to deliver CPD – Advances in Psychiatric Treatment and CPD Online (see p. 5) – is made available by the Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Psychiatrists to its members, and we are actively seeking similar partnerships with other international bodies.

Leading, representing and supporting psychiatrists

A host of different organisations around the world represent psychiatrists and allied professions locally. The College seeks to support all this good work with memoranda of understanding (MoUs) with such important bodies. In 2011, MoUs have been agreed with the Hong Kong College of Psychiatrists, the University of Melbourne, the Schizophrenia Research Foundation Chennai, the Maharashtra Institute of Mental Health Pune, the Armenian Psychiatric Association, the Chinese Society of Psychiatry and the Spanish Society for Old Age Psychiatry.

Work with service users, carers and their organisations

The College's Volunteer Programme continues to send psychiatrists overseas for a range of placements in South Asia and Africa. As well as working directly with services users and carers, volunteers work to develop service capacity by training local medics and health workers.

PRESIDENT'S MEDALS

President's Medals were awarded this year for the second time. The initiative was established by Immediate Past-President Professor Dinesh Bhugra to honour individuals who have made significant contributions to improving the lives of people with mental illness. In 2011, medals were presented to nine people who were chosen for their outstanding contributions in varied fields – research, education, clinical work, advocacy, the media and public policy:

SUMMARISED ACCOUNTS TO 31 DECEMBER 2010

Comprising the Treasurer's Report (pp. 18–19), Statement of Financial Activities (p. 20), Balance Sheet and explanatory notes (p. 21)

Treasurer's report

It is with mixed feelings that I present my final report as Honorary Treasurer on the financial year ended 31 December 2010.

I am pleased to confirm that this year the College's finances have improved further. However, the future remains uncertain and austerity is necessarily high on the agenda.

2010 Financial overview

The College's income amounted to £17.4m with expenditure totaling £15.8m. We concluded the year with an operational surplus of £1.6m before unrealised gains on investments of £134k were included. Approximately half of the surplus relates to restricted income received in advance, which the College will be using in the next 2 years.

Bequests

The College is grateful to the late Margaret Mary Slack who bequeathed £200k for the purpose of setting up an endowment to fund a travelling fellowship and to the late Mary Whewell Taylor who bequeathed an interim payment of £70k, which has been allocated to the New Building Fund.

New building project

The College has taken further steps to address securing premises beyond the expiry of the lease of 17 Belgrave Square in 2034. College Trustees agreed that the first one percent in any percentage increase in membership fees be allocated to the New Building Fund from 2010 (increased to two percent for 2011). The unforeseen surge in the number of exam candidates had led to an unexpected level of surplus. To help safeguard the College for future generations, the surplus has been transferred into the New Building Fund. Specific fundraising from other sources will be necessary and Council has agreed to the appointment of external experts to carry out preliminary steps for major fundraising commencing in 2011 (c. £20k).

Austerity and College-wide budgeting

Austerity has been a priority on the College agenda. The Senior Management Team has initiated a plan to enable the College to work towards a position where it can gradually reduce up to 10% of expenditure (£1.5m), if necessary. The Finance Department has now implemented a zero-based College-wide budgeting process and produced comprehensive budgets for the next 3 years.

Internal audit

Council agreed to the creation of an internal audit function. This will enhance the College's governance structure and internal controls, and reflects the sector's best practice. A selection of suitable independent accountancy firms have been invited to tender for the provision of internal audit services.

Growth in membership of the College

Overall membership of the College has grown at a rate of 2.3% (2009 – 6.5%) increasing to 15,445 (2009 – 15,097). The total number of members includes 2,690 from overseas across grades.

Income

Income from membership subscriptions has increased by c. £301k (total membership fees received c. £4.55m) due to the growth in membership numbers and a 4% increase in subscription fees.

Professor George Ikkos,
Honorary Treasurer

The International Congress in Edinburgh generated an income of £582 k, 72% higher than 2009.

However, the College Education and Training Centre (CETC) performed under budget this year and the net surplus decreased by £100 k. The College's training activities will be monitored closely.

This year the National Collaborating Centre for Mental Health (NCCMH) received approximately £240 k of additional restricted funds in advance from the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence.

However, the College Centre for Quality Improvement (CCQI) generated less income than expected (surplus of £588 k before College overheads contribution compared with £754 k in 2009).

Expenditure

Work has proceeded on investing in a new CCQI information management system which will continue to be developed next year and has been budgeted at c. £450 k. The College has also invested in a new system for human resources, and will invest in cloud technology in 2011.

The College continues to grow, with staff costs amounting to £7.2 m in 2010 (2009 – £6.5 m). The total number of staff has increased from 172 to 194. The main growth has been in CCQI (13) and NCCMH (3); however, some additional resources were given in departments such as Examinations, Policy, divisional offices, human resources and IT.

I am pleased to confirm this year the College invested £30 k in senior management training. This has included the objectives of enhancing leadership qualities and improving service to membership. Improving service to membership is a high priority for College Trustees.

Governance

Induction days were held for new Trustees and Financial Officers of the Faculties, Sections, Divisions and Special Interest Groups (FSDSIGs), emphasising the joint responsibility of Trustees to ensure the financial governance of the College as a whole. In March a workshop on business planning provided Financial Officers and FSDSIG managers with the opportunity to give feedback regarding business planning, and Finance staff the opportunity to explain the rationale behind the process.

I would like to express my thanks to Professor Michael Farrell, Dr Josanne Holloway and Dr Rao Nimmagadda who completed their terms as members of Finance Management Committee this year. Their contribution has been invaluable and I am very grateful to them indeed for their wise counsel.

College investment portfolio

In 2010 £1 m was transferred from College general funds to the investment firm Brewin Dolphin. At the end of December the College's investment portfolio had a value of £2.12 m. Trustees are considering investing more money in the equity market in 2011.

Conclusion

2010 has been a successful year financially and College Trustees and staff will continue to work towards controlling spending, enhancing income and preparing the College for the potential impact of national austerity. The College will therefore remain financially cautious in the year to come.

Finally, I would like to express my gratitude to Vanessa Cameron and Paul Taylor for their counsel and determined efforts to ensure that the College remains financially sound. I am also grateful to the Finance staff for their efforts and consistent good humour, even in the face of difficult circumstances at times.
